Our Life Skills Program provides ongoing educational activities for individuals with intellectual and developmental disabilities. These activities support the individual to establish a meaningful, valued role in the community.

Some areas of training include self-advocacy, social skills, physical fitness, and vocational development. These services are scheduled for six hours daily during weekdays.

Many individuals who participate in our program are actively seeking employment in the community. Some individuals are currently employed but attend the program part-time to enhance their skills in the areas in which they are most interested.

Weekly activities include community outings, volunteer work, workplace job shadowing and tours, guest speakers from local employers, guest instructors in art, etiquette, and exercise, and individualized activities to attain personal goals.

Meaningful day activities provide a community for individuals with intellectual and developmental disabilities acquire the life skills needed to experience independence and personal growth.
